Contemporary Gnosticism

"Gnosticism presumes "a purely subjective faith whose only interest is a certain experience or a set of ideas and bits of information which are meant to console and enlighten, but which ultimately keep one imprisoned in his or her own thoughts and feelings. Thanks be to God, throughout the history of the Church it has always been clear that a person's perfection is measured not by the information or knowledge they possess, but by the depth of their charity. "Gnostics" do not understand this, because they judge others based on their ability to understand the complexity of certain doctrines. They think of the intellect as separate from the flesh, and thus become incapable of touching Christ's suffering flesh in others, locked up as they are in an encyclopaedia of abstractions. In the end, by disembodying the mystery, they prefer "a God without Christ, a Christ without the Church, a Church without her people".

Certainly this is a superficial conceit: there is much movement on the surface, but the mind is neither deeply moved nor affected. Still, gnosticism exercises a deceptive attraction for some people, since the gnostic approach is strict and allegedly pure, and can appear to possess a certain harmony or order that encompasses everything. Here we have to be careful. I am not referring to a rationalism inimical to Christian faith. It can be present within the Church, both among the laity in parishes and teachers of philosophy and theology in centres of formation. Gnostics think that their explanations can make the entirety of the faith and the Gospel perfectly comprehensible. They absolutize their own theories and force others to submit to their way of thinking. A healthy and humble use of reason in order to reflect on the theological and moral teaching of the Gospel is one thing. It is another to reduce Jesus' teaching to a cold and harsh logic that seeks to dominate everything.

When somebody has an answer for every question, it is a sign that they are not on the right road. They may well be false prophets, who use religion for their own purposes, to promote their own psychological or intellectual theories. God infinitely transcends us; he is full of surprises. We are not the ones to determine when and how we will encounter him; the exact times and places of that encounter are not up to us. Someone who wants everything to be clear and sure presumes to control God's transcendence. Nor can we claim to say where God is not, because God is mysteriously present in the life of every person, in a way that he himself chooses, and we cannot exclude this by our presumed certainties. Even when someone's life appears completely wrecked, even when we see it devastated by vices or addictions, God is present there. If we let ourselves be guided by the Spirit rather than our own preconceptions, we can and must try to find the Lord in every human life. This is part of the mystery that a gnostic mentality cannot accept, since it is beyond its control" (Pope Francis, Apostolic Exhortation Gaudete Et Exultate, nn. 36-39; 41-42).

Question: What can we do to avoid our Christian faith from becoming a purely subjective matter?

For mental health ministry

Let us pray that the mental health ministry be established throughout the Church, helping to overcome the stigma and discrimination of persons with mental illnesses.

Irons Sharpens Marriage

"Being part of a Catholic men's group can strengthen your vocation as a husband and father"

In the article "Irons Sharpens Marriage" the author Jay Wonacott explains that being part of a Catholic men's group can have a powerful impact on a man's faith, marriage, and vocation as a husband and father. By meeting regularly with other Catholic men, they have the opportunity to share their faith, personal struggles, joys, and challenges while encouraging one another to live out their Christian values. These friendships provide support and understanding, reminding men that they do not have to face the difficulties of life and marriage alone. Through these relationships, men can grow spiritually, strengthen their marriages, and become better examples of faith for their children and families.

The author also recognizes that many men may find it difficult to open up about their feelings, faith, or personal struggles. However, building strong friendships with other Catholic men creates a safe and supportive environment where they can be honest, learn from one another, and encourage each other through life's challenges.

Overall, men are encouraged to become more involved in their parishes, develop meaningful relationships, and deepen their relationship with God. The article emphasizes the importance of courage, trust, and a willingness to be vulnerable in order to build these connections.
