Stay Awake

"The Christian who unites his own death to that of Jesus views it as a step towards him, and an entrance into everlasting life. When the Church for the last time speaks Christ's words of pardon and absolution over the dying Christian, seals him for the last time with a strengthening anointing, and gives him Christ in viaticum as nourishment for the journey, she speaks with gentle assurance: Go forth, Christian soul, from this world in the name of God the almighty Father, who created you, in the name of Jesus Christ, the Son of the living God, who suffered for you, in the name of the Holy Spirit, who was poured out upon you. Go forth, faithful Christian! May you live in peace this day, may your home be with God in Zion, with Mary, the virgin Mother of God, with Joseph, and all the angels and saints.... May you return to [your Creator] who formed you from the dust of the earth. May holy Mary, the angels, and all the saints come to meet you as you go forth from this life....May you see your Redeemer face to face.

Death puts an end to human life as the time is open to either accepting or rejecting the divine grace manifested in Christ. The New Testament speaks of judgment primarily in its aspect of the final encounter with Christ in his second coming, but also repeatedly affirms that each will be rewarded immediately after death in accordance with his works and faith. The parable of the poor man Lazarus and the words of Christ on the cross to the good thief, as well as other New Testament texts speak of a final destiny of the soul - a destiny which can be different for some and for others. Each man receives his eternal retribution in his immortal soul at the very moment of his death, in a particular judgment that refers his life to Christ: either entrance into the blessedness of heaven-through a purification or immediately,-or immediate and everlasting damnation" (Catechism of the Catholic Church, nn. 1020-1022).

"The last day of history, the end of time, has often been described as a tragic day and has given rise to a type of literature we call 'apocalyptic.' Jesus Christ announced that he would return to earth, and that this coming would be final. But how should a Christian prepare? Let's consider two kinds of 'waiting.' The first is similar to that of a soldier in his trench, fearfully awaiting the enemy's attack. His only hope is that this moment will never come, because he knows it could end badly. It is the attitude of someone who sees the end approaching, thinking he will be condemned for his sins. He trembles, but he doesn't do anything about it either. The second kind of waiting is that of a wife waiting for her husband, who has been absent from home for a long time. For example, the wife of a soldier, who dreams of the day he will once again embrace the love of her life. And when that day draws near, she prepares herself, dresses up, perfumes herself, and gets ready to receive him with all the joy in the world" (www.catholic.net).

Question: Which of the two types of waiting am I identifying with in the way I live my Christian life?

Please pray for the Special Intentions of Pope Leo XIV to receive plenary indulgences November 2026:

For the proper use of wealth

Let us pray for the proper use of wealth, that not succumbing to the temptation of selfishness, it may always be put at the service the common good and solidarity of those who have less.

Marriage Makes Men of Us

" The measure of true manhood lies in the willingness to give up one's life out of love"

In his article "Marriage Makes Men of Us," author Joseph Pearce explains that true manhood is not measured by physical strength, wealth, or the ability to get what we want, but by the willingness to sacrifice ourselves out of love for others. Using Shakespeare's The Merchant of Venice, he illustrates how marriage challenges a man to move beyond selfishness and become someone who is willing to put his wife and family before himself.

Pearce explains that marriage requires us to let go of our own pride, desires, and selfish ways so that we can grow in love, commitment, and responsibility. He reminds us that true maturity comes from learning to put the needs of others ahead of our own, rather than living only for personal happiness or pleasure. Marriage teaches us that love is not simply about what we receive, but about what we are willing to give.

Ultimately, Pearce's message is that marriage helps shape a man into a better person by teaching him selflessness, sacrifice, and devotion. Through the commitment of marriage and the gift of family, both husband and wife have the opportunity to grow in virtue, strengthen one another, and become more loving people.
