Created to Bear Fruits

"Well done, my good and faithful servant. Since you were faithful in small matters, I will give you great responsibilities. Come, share your master's joy." (Matthew 25:21). This parable invites us to reflect on a simple but profound truth: everything we have is a gift from God, and every gift is entrusted to us for a purpose. Our talents, intelligence, time, resources, opportunities, and even our ability to love and serve are not ours to keep selfishly. They belong to the Lord, who lovingly entrusts them to our care. One day, He will ask us not how much we possessed, but what we did with what He gave us.

In this Sunday's Gospel reading, notice that the first two servants were commended not because they received the same amount, but because they were faithful with what was entrusted to them. The third servant, however, buried his talent because he was afraid. Fear paralyzed him. Instead of taking a risk, he chose to do nothing. There is, indeed, a healthy fear that keeps us humble, cautious, and mindful of our responsibilities before God. But there is also a paralyzing fear, the fear of failure, criticism, rejection, or not being good enough, that prevents us from becoming the people God calls us to be. Sometimes, we bury our gifts because we are afraid to try. We remain silent when we could encourage someone, refuse to serve because we feel inadequate, or withhold our generosity because we fear having less. Without realizing it, we bury the very blessings God intends us to share.

Why should we strive to be productive with God's gifts? Is it simply so that God will bless us? No. God blesses us not merely so that we can have more, but so that we can become a blessing to others. The gifts we receive are never meant to end with us. Our knowledge can enlighten others, our resources can help those in need, our faith can strengthen the weak, and our love can bring hope to the discouraged. The more faithfully we use what God has given us, the more lives we can touch with His goodness. Perhaps the Lord is calling us today to take that first step, to share that hidden gift, to serve in a ministry, to reconcile with someone, or to reach out to a person who needs our help. One day, we will stand before the Lord and return everything to the One who gave it to us.

May we not come before Him with our gifts untouched and our opportunities wasted, but with hearts full of gratitude, knowing that we have tried to make His blessings bear fruit. May our greatest achievement not be how much we have accumulated for ourselves, but how much of God's love we have allowed to flow through us into the lives of others. And may we one day hear those beautiful words of our Master: "Well done, my good and faithful servant. Come, share your master's joy." (Very Reverend José Emilio (Joshua) Santos).

Question: How can you use your God given talents to serve others?

Fr. Marco

For the proper use of wealth

Let us pray for the proper use of wealth, that not succumbing to the temptation of selfishness, it may always be put at the service the common good and solidarity of those who have less.

Love Bears Fruit

"Carrying the cross of infertility with Christ can become a path to unexpected gifts"

In the article Love Bears Fruit the authors Leigh and Carter Snead explain that infertility can be a difficult and painful cross for a married couple to carry, but it can also become an opportunity to grow stronger in their faith, their love, and their relationship with one another. They share their own experience of struggling with infertility and explain how, through the years, they learned that marriage and family are about much more than simply having children. A family begins the day two people make their wedding vows and commit to loving each other through every season of life. The authors encourage couples who are facing infertility not to let the struggle consume their marriage or take away from the love they share. Instead, they should continue making time for each other, finding ways to enjoy life together, and allowing family and friends to offer support and encouragement. They also remind couples to seek guidance from the Catholic Church when considering medical treatments and to remain open to the possibility of adoption.

Most importantly, the article reminds us that God's plan for our lives may look different from what we originally imagined, but that doesn't mean it is without blessings. Even through disappointment, heartbreak, and unanswered prayers, God can bring unexpected gifts and opportunities for growth. The message is that love is not measured by whether a couple has children, but by the commitment, faith, and love they continue to share with one another.
